A spectrochemical series is a list of ligands ordered by ligand "strength", and a list of metal ions based on oxidation number, group and element. The spectrochemical series places ligands in order of increasing that is, the magnitude of the energy difference between the d-orbitals that an electron jumps between when light is absorbed. It is the basis of quantitative Analysis of Absorption Spectroscopy. A photometric titration curve is a plot of absorbance as a function of the volume of titrant. The spectrometer detects the color change of an ... The spectrochemical series is a list of ligands arranged according to the strength of the crystal field they produce when bound to a metal ion. Different ligands affect the energy levels of a metal's d-orbitals in ... A spectrochemical series is a list of ligands arranged according to their "strength" and a list of metal ions arranged according to their element, oxidation number, and group. The spectrochemical series gets its name because of a shift in a band of the UV-Vis spectrum when two similar complexes are compared that have two different ligands. spectrochemical analysis, methods of chemical analysis that depend upon the measurement of the wavelength and the intensity of electromagnetic radiation.
