In chemistry, solubility is the ability of a substance, the solute, to form a solution with another substance, the solvent. Insolubility is the opposite property, the inability of the solute to form such a solution. Solubility is defined as the ability of a substance to dissolve in a solvent, with factors such as molecular interactions influencing the extent to which substances like sucrose can dissolve in water. Solubility is the ability of a solute to dissolve in a solvent to form a solution. This is the property that allows things like sugar molecules to dissolve in a cup of coffee. Solubility refers to the ability of one substance to dissolve in another, forming a solution, which is a homogeneous mixture where individual components are evenly distributed. The solubility of a solute in a particular solvent is the maximum concentration that may be achieved under given conditions when the dissolution process is at equilibrium. The amount of salt that must be added to a given volume of solvent to form a saturated solution is called the solubility of the salt. Solubility Rules. There are a number of patterns in the data obtained from ... Solubility is defined as the upper limit of solute that can be dissolved in a given amount of solvent at equilibrium.
