Canada as Statebuilder? Laura Grant
2021-08-18 Canada's statebuilding efforts in Afghanistan are not well documented. After fourteen years of significant investments in humanitarian causes, there are still questions about the impact of these projects and whether they delivered as promised or fell short. In Canada as Statebuilder? Laura Grant and Benjamin Zyla analyze over one hundred and thirty Canadian-led development projects in Afghanistan to illustrate that Canada has a limited capacity to effectively run humanitarian efforts in unstable, insecure, or inaccessible environments. Canadian or Canadian-sponsored development projects were ambitious and highly productive in terms of outputs in the short term, especially in the areas of security, women and gender, health, and education. However, when their outcomes and overall impact are assessed, the authors argue, Canada's record is less impressive. Their analysis contributes to evidence-based discussions of one of Canada's most important foreign policy activities in recent years. Reflecting on Canada's engagement in Afghanistan, Canada as Statebuilder? asks whether Canadian peacekeeping efforts in the region were ultimately worth the economic and human resources invested.

Ashes of Policy Kian Tate 2026-04-14 For more than two centuries, the institutions built to protect people living with schizophrenia have, with quiet regularity, become instruments of harm. From the overcrowded moral treatment asylums of the nineteenth century — where containment replaced care — to the deinstitutionalization movements of the 1960s and 1970s, policy after policy promised relief but delivered neglect. The passage of the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act in California, born from an unlikely alliance between fiscal conservatism and civil libertarian idealism, fractured the already fragile architecture of psychiatric care and ushered in an era of transinstitutionalization. Jails and prisons filled where hospitals had emptied. In the Soviet Union, the diagnosis of schizophrenia was weaponized entirely — repurposed to silence political dissidents under the invented classification of "sluggishly progressing schizophrenia," condemned by the World Psychiatric Association in 1977. In Nazi Germany, those diagnosed with schizophrenia were among the first targets of compulsory sterilization laws in 1933, later progressing toward systematic killing. These were not aberrations. They were policy.
