Gastrin is a hormone with important functions in your digestive system. It helps trigger stomach acid and enzyme production to start the digestive process. Cholecystokinin acts together with another hormone called leptin to regulate hunger signals. People with obesity may have an imbalance of hunger and satiety signals in their brains. What is a ... Estrogen plays a role in many life stages, like puberty, pregnancy and menopause. But it also influences several other aspects of your health. Learn about how it affects your body. What is the function of glucagon? If you have a fully functioning pancreas, your body carefully regulates your blood glucose (sugar). It mainly does this with the hormones glucagon and insulin. When your ... Hormones are chemicals that coordinate different functions in your body by carrying messages through your blood to your organs, skin, muscles and other tissues. The hormones insulin-like growth factor (IGF-1) and growth hormone (GH) regulate adiponectin release in adipose tissue. Leptin (another adipokine) may also play a role in adiponectin regulation. What test ... Progesterone is a hormone that supports menstruation and maintaining a pregnancy. Low levels can cause complications. Prolactin is an important hormone for pregnancy and breastfeeding. Otherwise, you might not think of it much unless you have signs of abnormally high prolactin levels, like irregular periods and infertility. ... Function What is the function of leptin? Leptin's main function is to help your body maintain its weight. Leptin regulates the long-term balance between your body's food intake and energy use. Leptin ... Ghrelin is the hunger hormone. It stimulates appetite and signals your brain when it's time to eat. Ghrelin also helps with releasing insulin and growth hormones.
