

Advanced Economics Theory H L Ahuja

Principles of Microeconomics, 22e Ahuja

H.L. 2022 The book makes a comprehensive and analytical study of theories of demand, production/cost and determination of price and output of products in different market structures. It also discusses theory of factor pricing and income distribution as wages, rent, interest and profits. Above all, it critically analyses the conditions of economic efficiency and maximum social welfare and causes of market failures. It takes a further lead with this revision by aligning its contents with the prescribed UGC model curriculum and new Choice Based Credit System (CBCS) syllabus.

Anthropological Economics: Our second tranche of extensions on Anthropological Economics Sujay Rao Mandavilli 2026-01-10

The concepts of anthropological economics were introduced by us in the year 2020 in a paper entitled "Introducing Anthropological Economics: The quest for an Anthropological basis for Economic theory, growth models and policy development for wealth and human welfare maximization" and was published in the journal ELK Asia Pacific Journal of Social Sciences Volume 6, Issue 3 (April -June 2020). The paper was subsequently published in Google books later in the same year. Subsequently, several other papers were also published. The objective of our work on anthropological economics has been to attempt to merge the concepts and theoretical frameworks of the disciplines of Anthropology and Economics, thereby creating a new sub field in Economics called 'Anthropological Economics' which is mired in Anthropological concepts and principles and sought to maximize not only human welfare and happiness but also wealth maximization across cultures, while considering both the psychic unity of man, universal human needs and culturespecific factors. Thus, the field of Anthropological Economics is expected to be inter-related to other disciplines of Economics, but remain complementary to them i.e., it is not expected that it would intrude into other sub-fields of economics, replace them, or override their principles in any way. It would therefore we anticipated, draw upon other aspects of economic theory, and enrich them suitably. It is therefore expected that all aspects of Economic theory would be taken into consideration for policy formulation and decision-making, including those of Anthropological economics, and independent, context-specific judgment would always be applied. The new and novel proposed field of Anthropological Economics proposes to take the idea of Human Welfare to its logical conclusion by extending the work already carried out in various sub-disciplines of economics such as those proposed by Amartya Sen and others, and integrate it more tightly with various concepts in Anthropology. Many new tools and techniques have therefore, been proposed as a part of our overall work, and we believe these would suitably enrich the field of Economics as well. While many attempts have been made in the past to integrate the fields of Anthropology and Economics, we hope, anticipate, expect and believe that 3 our endeavour would take this exercise to a much higher level, by creating a new generation of "Anthroeconomists". We also hope that it will eventually help move mainstream economics away from Neo-classical approaches (what we prefer to call legacy economics at this point in time) to Anthropological and human-centric approaches. The present volume presents our second tranche of additional and auxiliary concepts in anthropological economics. The present volume must be read after the contents of the first two previous volumes have been fully read and ingested. We say this in the interests of absolute reader clarity. This is because the original paper and the previous extensions have not been reproduced here.

Economic Inequality - Trends, Traps and Trade-offs Medani P. Bhandari 2022-09-01 The book "Economic Inequality - Trends, Traps and Trade-offs" presents the unexplored issues of economic inequality, including case studies of various countries. Inequality is a chronic divisive factor of society. It is well known that inequalities (such as economic, social, cultural, religious, geographical, etc.) have been omnipresent in human society. Inequalities can be found within each family, each community, and each nation and thus globally. Inequality is a major cause of political, economic, social instability, and creates crisis and conflict within society. A major cause of inequality is unequal, uneven, biased, power centric distributions of human economic, social, political, cultural and spiritual human necessities. The edited book examines the major parameters of the socio-economic issues of inequality and focuses on the key economic issues of inequality, namely, income and wealth distribution, equity & equality of outcome, and equality of opportunities. Economic inequality is measured by wealth, income disproportions in distribution and consumption patterns in a specific area. Mostly, inequality is measured using various statistical tools including the Gini Coefficient, inequality adjusted human development index, 20:20 ratio, Palma ratio, Hoover index, Galt score, Coefficient of variation, Theil index, wage share etc. However, not all income can be measured by these tools. By using case studies, this book encourages us to reframe economic development through the lens of growing inequalities and disparities. Economic growth per se is disproportional, and the efforts of scholars, practitioners and policymakers should be directed to empower the marginalized of society in a way that 'no one should left behind' (UN Slogan).
