

Sources Of East Asian Tradition The Modern Period

Choose from General and Specialized Sources in general terms. Specialized sources, such as scholarly books and academic journals, usually address narrower audiences in specific fields and ... Sources are typically found through conducting research in a library or on the internet. There are three main types of sources: primary, secondary, and tertiary. For this type of assignment, you may also rely on sources to help you understand the context of the debate, to find the evidence that you will analyze to figure out where you stand on the issue, and to ... By describing eight ways of putting sources to work in your paper, this handout can help you better understand your specific purpose each time you bring another person's ideas to bear on your argument. Primary sources are the original materials or evidence to be analyzed, evaluated, contextualized, or synthesized in the research process. Secondary sources analyze, evaluate, contextualize, or ... your topic. This handout provides a basic overview of how to incorporate textual sources into your writing, but always consult a style guide (MLA, APA, Chicago, etc.) for specific citation guidelines. Sources selected for use in research can usually be categorized according to types: primary, secondary, and tertiary. Primary sources provide the most direct evidence of a topic being developed in a ...
