Declarations in UPPAAL The syntax used for declarations in UPPAAL is similar to the syntax used in the C programming language. Clocks: Syntax: Example: clock x, y; Declares two clocks: x and y. Synchronization Semantics in UPPAAL Used to coordinate the action of two or more processes. Transitions with the same synchronization channel are activated simultaneously Guards must be true We describe three of the new features: User defined functions, priorities and symmetry reduction. UPPAAL is a verification tool for timed automata. This document is intended to be used by newcomers to Uppaal and verification. Students or engineers with little background in formal methods should be able to use Uppaal for practical purposes after ... The query language of Uppaal, used to specify properties to be checked, is a subset of TCTL (timed computation tree logic) [39,3]. In this section we present the modelling and the query languages of ... Uppaal modeling language Networks of Timed Automata with Invariants urgent action channels, broadcast channels, urgent and committed locations, data-variables (with bounded domains), Zenoness Problem: UPPAAL does not check for zenoness directly. A model has "zeno" behavior if it can take an infinite amount of actions in finite time. That is usually not a desirable behavior in practice. ...
