A propellant is any substance engineered to generate a motive force, pressure, or thrust. This is achieved through the rapid chemical conversion of stored energy or the mechanical release of compressed energy. In this article, we will cover the major categories of propellants, the tradeoffs engineers consider, and why certain missions favor one fuel over another. Propellant, any gas, liquid, or solid the expansion of which can be used to impart motion to another substance or object. In aerosol dispensers, compressed gases such as nitrous oxide, carbon dioxide, ...
