Smart Materials for Science and Engineering Upendra Kumar 2024-06-05 SMART MATERIALS FOR SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING Smart materials, also known as advanced or creative materials, are described as advanced materials that react intuitively to environmental changes or as materials that can return to their original shape in response to certain stimuli. Smart materials are classified as either active or passive based on their characteristics. There are two types of active materials. The first kind cannot change its characteristics when subjected to outside stimuli, for example photochromatic spectacles that only alter their color when exposed to sunlight. The other, which includes piezoelectric materials, can change one sort of energy (thermal, electrical, chemical, mechanical, or optical) into another. When subjected to external pressure, it can generate an electric charge. As an example, optical fibers can transmit electromagnetic waves. In contrast, passive smart materials can transmit a specific sort of energy. They have some amazing qualities that set them apart from other materials, such as transiency, meaning they can react to different kinds of external stimuli immediately, self-actuation or the capacity to change their appearance and shape, selectivity where the response is divided and expected, directness when the response is limited to the activating event, shape-changing where the material can change its shape to external stimuli, their ability to determine their own health, also known as self-diagnosis, and their ability to self-heal. The ability to synthesize novel materials has substantially progressed thanks to science and technology over the past 20 years. They fall mostly into the following four categories: polymers, ceramics, metals, and smart materials. Among these, smart materials are gaining popularity since they have more uses than conventional materials. Smart materials are unusual substances that have the ability to alter their properties, such as those that can immediately change their phase when placed near a magnet or their shape simply by applying heat. Humanity will be significantly impacted by this new era of smart materials. For instance, some of them can adapt their properties to the environment, some have sensory capabilities, some can repair themselves automatically, and some can degrade themselves. These extraordinary properties of smart materials will have an effect on all facets of civilization. There are many different types of intelligent materials, including magnetorheological materials, electro-rheostat materials, shape memory alloys, piezoelectric materials, and more. This book describes many forms of smart materials and their possible uses in various fields. A literature survey discusses the different types of smart materials, such as based ceramics, polymers, and organic compounds and their needs, advantages, disadvantages, and applications will be comprehensively discussed. A discussion of well-established smart materials including piezoelectric, magnetostrictive, shape memory alloy, electro-rheological fluid, and magnetorheological fluid materials will be discussed with their present prospects.

Recent Trends in Engineering and Technology (NCRTE-2017) Bijoy Kumar Upadhyaya 2018-03-05 After successful organization of the "National Seminar on Energy Science and Engineering, 2013 (NSESE-2013)" during November, 2013, Tripura Institute of Technology, Narsingarh, Tripura (West) has organized the second "National Conference on Recent Trends in Engineering and Technology, 2017 (NCRTE-2017)" during March 17-18, 2017. The seminar aimed to provide an opportunity for academicians and researchers in India to discuss the divergent issues related to recent trends in engineering and technology covering all aspects on one platform so as to critically examine the ongoing/current research and derive directions for future research strategies and policy implications. As a mark of remembrance, a souvenir was published on this occasion. The conference has received enormous response in the form of technical papers and research contributions from various authors across the country. In total, 55 numbers of technical papers related to different engineering domain were accepted for oral presentation. Four invited papers from renowned faculty members of our country were also presented on the occasion. We are also happy to keep our commitment of publishing a conference proceeding with ISBN through a prestigious publisher having all accepted full length papers.

Irrigation Management in Pakistan

Books in Print Supplement 1982

Water for Food Security Claudia Ringler 2016-03-22 Pakistan's water management is at a critical watershed. The world's seventh-most populous country faces serious challenges that will require improvements in both the "hardware" and "software" of agricultural water management. Water shortages are growing rapidly as a result of growing demand across all water-using sectors. Rapid population growth, from 175 million people in 2010 to an estimated 236 million by 2030 and 280 million by 2050, and international food-price spikes create pressure to increase agricultural production of staples; but demand for cash crops is also growing rapidly, including for cotton, fruit trees and tobacco, to raise rural incomes and generate rural employment to absorb the relatively young, rapidly growing rural population. Water management is also increasingly affected by climate change - including an increased number of flood and drought events - and growing energy shortages, which affect how water is being sourced and used. Last but not least, Pakistan's political situation is fragile, which has reduced incentives to invest in enhanced agricultural water (and other) technologies. How Pakistan addresses these challenges will be decisive for its population's future water and food security, for economic growth, and for environmental sustainability.

It will also affect water and food outcomes globally, due to the interconnectedness of global food trade. This book was published as a special issue of Water International.
