Computational Intelligence for Business Analytics and Decision Systems Bahaaeddin Alareeni 2026-07-01 This book offers a complete and forward-looking discussion of how artificial intelligence and advanced analytics are changing modern business decision-making. This book combines foundational theory with leading-edge application in computational intelligence to offer a structured approach to intelligent, data-driven enterprise systems. This book brings together contributions from leading thinkers in the field and covers foundational methodologies including machine learning, deep learning, neural networks, fuzzy logic, soft computing, evolutionary and genetic algorithms, and hybrid intelligent systems. It also explores other important areas including predictive and prescriptive analytics, optimization algorithms, big data analytics, and data mining techniques to support intelligent business systems. This book also explores how these methodologies are applied in financial analytics, risk management, portfolio optimization, customer analytics, market segmentation, demand forecasting, supply chain analytics, and operations optimization. It also places special emphasis on explainable artificial intelligence, intelligent decision support systems, and enterprise performance analytics to ensure that advanced computational models are transparent, reliable, and strategically aligned to enterprise goals. This book is intended for researchers, postgraduate students, data scientists, financial analysts, operations managers, digital transformation leaders, and other professionals who are interested in computational intelligence and its application in intelligent business systems. It offers a structured approach to intelligent enterprise systems, which can increase competitiveness, improve forecasting, optimize enterprise resources, and support digital transformation in a sustainable manner. With its blend of rigorous analytical techniques and practical business insights, this book is an essential reference to how intelligent algorithms and decision systems are changing the future of business analytics.
