The meaning of SCATTERING is an act or process in which something scatters or is scattered. How to use scattering in a sentence. Scattering refers to the process where particles or waves are deflected in various directions when they encounter an obstacle or non-uniform medium. As defined in physics, a collision can occur between particles that repel one another, such as two positive (or negative) ions, and need not involve direct physical contact of the particles. Scattering can be broadly defined as the redirection of radiation out of the original direction of propagation, usually due to interactions with molecules and particles. In classical physics, these two terms are used to describe very different effects.
