Temple Health University ... Develop the skills necessary to become an effective, conscientious and civically minded agent of social change.
Expand your understanding of journalism's role in our society and explore how culture, economics and politics shape the public's relationship with the press. Students in all majors who are interested in creating and implementing real-world ideas that aid in the betterment of public health-related initiatives across the country may choose to pursue this 18-credit ... Geared toward non-business students, this minor helps you to gain a broad base of foundational business knowledge. Gain a fundamental understanding of biology, chemistry, geology or physics. Acquire broad, foundational knowledge of adolescent development, community and school relationships, and the current state of education.
Understand how to use emerging technologies to create, design and implement content for various digital media. Develop an understanding of health and illness through the lens of psychology and study the interplay among psychology, biology and environment. Deepen your understanding of a broad range of public health concerns. Expand your education in the communication arts and media production field across Temple's international campuses. Learn to create compelling content in various formats, including interactive and digital media, print and more. Gain the basic business foundations necessary to advance in the field and in your career. Explore how businesses identify, evaluate and respond to risk with the Corporate Risk Management Minor. Students in the International Communication Concentration (ICC) acquire a theoretical and practical education in international and intercultural communication and media. The Nutrition Minor is designed for students interested in understanding food, where it comes from, and how it affects health. Discover your unique personal voice and style while creating original work in your desired medium. Acquire the knowledge and skills needed to effectively lead individuals, organizations and teams while exploring how leadership is more than just a position. Form an understanding of public planning through studies in the ethics and principles of planning practice with an emphasis on citizen participation.
