Annual Report ... on the European Union's Development and External Assistance Policies and Their Implementation in ... 2013 Science John Michels (Journalist) 2009 Food Security in Southern Africa 2003 The severe food shortages and hunger that have recently struck countries in the Southern African Development Community (SADC) region, particularly in Malawi, Zimbabwe, Zambia, Lesotho, Swaziland and Mozambique, have been described by the World Food Programme as the 'worst food crisis in a decade'. The region has suffered from a lethal mix of food shortages, lack of access to basic social services and an alarmingly high prevalence of HIV/AIDS all contributing to the growing numbers of vulnerable people in rural and urban Southern Africa. According to several reports from missions undertaken in the SADC region in 2002 by the World Food Programme and the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations, fourteen million people were living on the brink of starvation and faced serious shortages until the region's main harvest in April 2003.

Evaluation of "Improving farmer livelihoods in the dry zone through improved livestock health, productivity and marketing" Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations 2020-04-01 The project aim was to sustainably improve the livelihoods and food security of communities and the poor and vulnerable in six townships in the Central Dry Zone (CDZ) of Myanmar through improving livestock health, productivity, and marketing. The project is highly relevant as livestock are critical to people's livelihoods in the area. It was evaluated as being efficiently delivered with very significant benefits being provided in developing livestock policies with good sustainability and identifying effective new technologies to promote livestock production in the CDZ. Of note, project efficiency was evaluated as being high with an adaptive approach taken as priorities changed and opportunities developed, and with strong government support providing considerable staff and other resources. At the time of the evaluation, the impact of the project remains limited as little extension work has been undertaken to improve livestock production practices and many of the policies being developed are yet to be finalized. However, the project has laid down a strong basis for the improvement in livestock policies and improved production practices and Government has taken strong ownership of these. The impact of the project will be enhanced over time as policies are consolidated and further extension of the new technologies undertaken.
